specter noun see SPECTRE.

spectinomycin /ˌspɛktɪnə'mʌɪsɪn/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from mod. Latin use as specific epithet (see below) of Latin spectabilis visible, remarkable, from spectare (see SPECTATE): see -O-, -MYCIN.]

S

PHARMACOLOGY. An antibiotic obtained from the bacterium Streptomyces spectabilis and used esp. to treat gonorrhoea that is resistant to penicillin.

spectra noun pl. of SPECTRUM.

spectral /ˈspɛktr(ə)l/ adjective. E18.
[ORIGIN from SPECTRE or directly from SPECTRUM + -AL¹.]
†1 Capable of seeing spectres. rare. Only in E18.
2 Of the nature of a spectre; resembling (that of) a spectre; ghostly. E19.

W. BLACK A pair of spectral horses apparently in mid-air.
O. MANNING The promenade was a spectral grey in the moon glimmer. R. FRAME Houses . . becoming paler and more spectral as the moon sailed clear.

3 Of or pertaining to the spectrum, appearing or observed in the spectrum. Also, designating a property or parameter which is being considered as a function of frequency or wavelength, or which pertains to a given frequency range or value within the spectrum. Cf. SPECTRUM 3a, b. M19.
– SPECIAL COLLOCATIONS: spectral analysis (a) CHEMISTRY the chemical analysis of substances by means of their spectra; (b) PHYSICS the analysis of light or another oscillating system into a spectrum. spectral class ASTRONOMY = spectral type below. spectral index ASTRONOMY an exponential factor relating the flux density of a radio source to the frequency. spectral-luminosity class ASTRONOMY the group in which a star is classified, relating its spectral characteristics to its luminosity. spectral luminous efficiency a measure of the ability of the eye to judge the power of monochromatic light of a given wavelength. spectral series: see SERIES noun 16. spectral tarsier a tarsier, Tarsius spectrum, which is distinguished by a scaly tail with a long bushy tuft, and occurs in forests in Sulawesi. spectral term: see TERM noun 13c. spectral type ASTRONOMY the group in which a star is classified according to its spectrum, esp. using the Harvard classification in which letters are used to represent particular surface temperatures.
■ spectrality noun (a) a ghost; (b) ghostliness; (c) MATH. the state of being expressible as a spectral function: M19. spectrally adverb M19.

spectre /ˈspɛktə/ noun. Also -ter. E17.
[ORIGIN French, or Latin spectrum, from specere look, see. Cf. SPECTRUM.]
1 An apparition, a ghost, esp. one of a terrifying nature or aspect. E17. ▸b In Epicurean philosophy, an image supposed to emanate from a corporeal thing. arch. L18.
2 fig. A haunting or terrifying presentiment. Freq. foll. by of. L18. ▸b A person resembling a ghost in appearance. E19.

E. YOUNG-BRUEHL The . . frightening specter of a mortal illness.
E. S. PERSON The spectre overshadowing love is the fear that it will end.

3 ENTOMOLOGY. A stick insect. Also spectre-insect. L18.
4 An image produced by reflection or other natural cause. E19.
Brocken spectre, spectre of the Brocken.
– COMB.: spectre-insect: see sense 3 above; spectre-lemur, spectre tarsier = spectral tarsier.
■ spectred adjective (now rare) (a) filled with spectres; (b) resembling a spectre: L18. spectredom noun the realm of spectres L19. spectrous adjective (now rare) spectral M17.

spectrin /ˈspɛktrɪn/ noun. M20.
[ORIGIN from SPECTRE + -IN¹, so called because it was isolated from red blood cell ghosts (see GHOST noun 11).]
BIOCHEMISTRY. A fibrous protein constituent of the membranes of red blood cells, forming a network on the inside of the plasma membrane.

spectro- /ˈspɛktrəʊ/ combining form (on Greek analogies) of SPECTRUM: see -O-.
■ spectrobolometer noun a combination of a spectroscope and a bolometer, designed to determine the wavelength distribution of radiant energy emitted by a source E20. spectroheliogram noun a photograph obtained with a spectroheliograph E20. spectroheliograph noun (a) an instrument which photographs the sun using light of a particular wavelength, esp. that of the Balmer α emission line of hydrogen; (b) rare a spectroheliogram: L19. spectrohelio'graphic adjective of, pertaining to, or employing a spectroheliograph E20. spectroheli'ometer noun a spectrophotometer for use in observing the sun L20. spectro'helioscope noun an instrument which provides a directly observable monochromatic image of the sun by means of a rapidly scanning device which transmits light of only one wavelength E20. spectrophone noun a device in which a body of gas may be caused to emit sound waves when illuminated by a periodically interrupted beam of electromagnetic radiation (usu. visible or infrared) L19. spectro'phonic adjective of, pertaining to, or employing a spectrophone L19. spectrophospho'rimeter noun a spectrometer designed for the observation of phosphorescence M20. spectrophosphori'metric adjective of, pertaining to, or employing spectrophosphorimetry M20. spectrophospho'rimetry noun spectrometry as applied to the observation of phosphorescence M20. spectrophotofluo'rometer noun a spectrophotometer designed for the observation of fluorescence M20. spectrophotofluoro'metric adjective of, pertaining to, or employing a spectrophotofluorometer M20. spectropola'rimeter noun an instrument designed to measure rotation of the plane of polarized light as a function of wavelength E20. spectropolari'metric adjective of, pertaining to, or employing spectropolarimetry M20. spectropola'rimetry noun the use of a spectropolarimeter M20. spectroradi'ometer noun a combination of a spectroscope and a radiometer, designed to measure the intensity of electromagnetic radiation over a range of wavelengths E20. spectroradio'metric adjective of, pertaining to, or employing spectroradiometry E20. spectroradi'ometry noun the scientific investigation of electromagnetic radiation at different wavelengths E20. spectrotype noun (IMMUNOLOGY) the range of antigens to which a given antibody is reactive L20.

spectrochemistry /ˌspɛktrəʊ)ˈkɛmɪstri/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from SPECTRO- + CHEMISTRY.]
The branch of chemistry that deals with the chemical application of spectroscopy, esp. in analysis, and with the interpretation of spectra in chemical terms.
■ spectrochemical adjective of or pertaining to spectrochemistry; spectrochemical series, a series of ligands arranged in order of magnitude of the ligand field splitting that they cause in the electronic orbitals of a central atom: L19. spectrochemically adverb as regards spectrochemistry; by spectrochemical methods: E20.

spectrofluorimetry /ˌspɛktrə(ʊ)fljʊəˈrɪmɪtri/ noun. Also -rometry /-ˈrɒmɪtri/. M20.
[ORIGIN from SPECTRO- + FLUORIMETRY.]
The spectrometric observation of fluorescence.
■ spectrofluorimeter noun a spectrometer designed for this M20. spectrofluori'metric adjective of, pertaining to, or employing spectrofluorimetry M20. spectrofluori'metrically adverb by means of spectrofluorimetry M20.

spectrograph /ˈspɛktrəgrɑːf/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from SPECTRO- + -GRAPH.]
1 An instrument for photographing a spectrum; any apparatus for producing a visual record of a spectrum (optical or otherwise). L19.
mass spectrograph, sound spectrograph, etc.
2 = SPECTROGRAM. Now rare or obsolete. L19.
■ spectrogram noun a photograph of a spectrum; any visual representation of a spectrum: L19. spec'trographer noun a person who uses a spectrograph M20. spectro'graphic adjective of, pertaining to, or employing spectrography L19. spectro'graphically adverb by means of a spectrograph E20. spec'trography noun the technique of using a spectrograph E20.

spectrology /spɛkˈtrɒlədʒi/ noun. rare. E19.
[ORIGIN from (the same root as) SPECTRO- + -OLOGY.]
1 The branch of knowledge that deals with spectres. E19.
2 The branch of science that deals with spectra. M19.
■ spectro'logical adjective E19.

spectrometer /spɛkˈtrɒmɪtə/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from SPECTRO- + -METER.]
Orig., an instrument for measuring a refractive index. Now, any of a wide range of instruments for producing spectra and measuring the positions etc. of spectral features.
mass spectrometer: see MASS *noun*² & adjective.
■ spectro'metric adjective of, pertaining to, or employing spectrometry L19. spectro'metrically adverb by means of spectrometry M20. spectrometrist noun an expert in spectrometry; a person employed to operate a spectrometer: M20. spectrometry noun the branch of science that deals with spectra E20.

spectrophotometer /ˌspɛktrə(ʊ)fəˈtɒmɪtə/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN from SPECTRO- + PHOTOMETER.]
An instrument incorporating a photometer and designed to measure the relative intensity of light (usu. transmitted or emitted by a substance under study) at different wavelengths in a particular region of the spectrum.
■ spectrophoto'metric adjective of, pertaining to, or employing spectrophotometry L19. spectrophoto'metrically adverb by means of spectrophotometry L19. spectrophotometry noun the technique of using a spectrophotometer L19.

spectroscope /ˈspɛktrəskəʊp/ noun & verb. M19.
[ORIGIN from SPECTRO- + -SCOPE.]
▸A noun. An instrument for the production and examination of spectra. M19.
mass spectroscope: see MASS *noun*² & adjective.
▸B verb trans. Examine by means of a spectroscope. Now rare. L19.
■ spectro'scopic adjective of, pertaining to, or employing the spectroscope; spectroscopic binary (ASTRONOMY), a star whose binary nature is revealed only by a study of its spectrum: M19. spectro'scopical adjective = SPECTROSCOPIC L19. spectro'scopically adverb by means of the spectroscope; in respect of spectroscopic qualities etc.: L19.

spectroscopy /spɛkˈtrɒskəpi/ noun. L19.
[ORIGIN formed as SPECTROSCOPE: see -SCOPY.]
The technique of using the spectroscope; the branch of science which involves the use of the spectroscope; the investigation of spectra by any of various instruments.
■ spectroscopist noun an expert in spectroscopy; a person employed to operate a spectroscope: M19.

spectrum /ˈspɛktrəm/ noun. Pl. -tra /-trə/, -trums. E17.
[ORIGIN Latin = image of a thing, apparition: see SPECTRE.]
1 An apparition, a spectre. arch. E17.
2 An image. rare. L17.
3 a The coloured band into which a beam of light is split by means of a prism or diffraction grating.
